THE OPERA HOUSE contained an average sized audience Saturday night for himself. to hear Governor Montague urge his claims for Mr. Martin's seat in the United States Senate. In point of enthusiasm the meeting was not a success, there being numbers of empty seats in the gallery as well as many in the main auditorium. A band discoursed air after air until about twenty minutes to nine o'clock, when the certain was rung delegation of Alexandrians and several residents of Alexandria and Fairfax counties. While no one will deny the fact that Governor Montague is ordinarily an entertaining speaker, it must have been apparent to his friends that he was not at his best Saturday night. He began in a labored manner; his speech, at times savored of demigogy, and throughout it was punctuated with pauses and hesitations. Most of the applause was feeble and forced, although at times prolonged it. The audience seemed occasionally slow to appreciate the points the speaker attempted to make and the paintul. With no intention of minimizing the Governor's power upon the rostrum, it can be said with truth that he failed on Saturday night to utter a single word in criticism of Senator Martin that the hall. The Governor endeavored labors of the junior Senator in behalf of Virginia and the country at large, but appealed to his own record as Attorney neral and Governor of the Old Dotainion, not forgetting to let his audience know that he had frequently refused to use the pardoning power-evidently referring to the fact that that he had allowed McCue to be hanged. The Governor expatiated on the personnel of the United States Senate, most severely criticizing some of its members, and to many it seemed that should he be elected to that body he would find he had sawed himself from the limb by entering the Senate an avowed enemy of many men he had never before met and with whom to be no less striking than in Asia. Rushe could have no influence. The Gov- sia's defeat will contribute to the aggranernor made some curious breaks. He said he did not desire to go to the Senate if he had nothing more to bank upon than influence with the dominant partya thrust at Senator Martin-and talked much about sentiment which he thought should be a prominent bump upon the It is shown in the entente cordiale that cranium of a representative man, quoting has Edmund Burke to strengthen his asser- and France, and through the medium tion. The principal object in the said that soon momentous issues would world's politics seems to be just now to come before the Senate and implied that the junior Senator would not be equal to the occasion, but that the speaker would be. As stated above, the speech was a failure so far as it abounded in anything convincing and fell far below most of the Governor's previous addresses in Alexandria. Murder Trial.

Rochester, N. Y., June 5.—Before Justice Edwin A. Nash, in the Supreme Court, this morning, began the trial of Ervin M. Smith, on a charge of murder in the second degree, a trial that promises to be most sensational in local criminal history. Smith is charged with the murder of his sweetheart, "Birdie" Hart, a young country girl. covery of the murder was made during an investigation of an att mpt to burn J. Whaller Company's packing house in the village of Webster, the home of the murdered girl and her lover. On the night of July 8, last, the packing house was fired, but the flames were extin-guished before any material damage had resulted. Two nights later the night watchman at the packing house heard some one moving about the place, and made an investigation. The result of the search was the finding of the girl's body in a corner of the basement. coroner's investigation showed that the girl was in a delicate condition, and that her death was due to strangulation. Snith, as the last person seen with the girl when she was alive, was suspected and ten days after the finding of the body, was arrested on a charge of murder.

Double Murder and Suicide.

Hillsboro, O., June 5. -- The home of Edward Hines, a farmer living two miles north of Hillsboro, was the scene last night of what is now thought to have een a double murder, and suicide. When Hines and his wife who had been in Hillsboro to hear a baccalaureate ser mon returned home and entered the house they stumbled over what proved to be the dead body of David Baldwin, a young man whom Hines had taken in about two years and cared for as if he were a son. A further examination dis closed the fact that in an upstairs bedroom, the daughter of Mrs. Hines, Miss Madge, aged 16, and a companion, Miss Nellie Bart, were also dead. The disordered room showed that a struggle had occurred, and it is thought that the young women fought for their lives to the last. A revolver was found in their room, and it was with this weapon that both killed. Beside the dead body of the young man was found a shot gun, which had been discharged. He was lying on his back, with his hands across his breast. When found the young women were dressed for bed. One of them was lying on the bed and the other on the floor. It learned on good authority that no attempt was made to criminally assault the young women. Bloodhounds have been sent for and they will immediately be put to work.

He attempted to pierce the Japanese line and make a dash for Vladivostok, but he was attacked by cruisers and torpedo boats and forced to make a running fight. The main attack of the Japanese was concentrated on the Russian battleships.

His own flagship was sunk and he transferred his flag to the Aurors. He was ultimately forced to flee to the southwest, taking that course at 10 o'clock Sunday night, and succeeded in making his escape with three of his ships in the darkness. He headed for Shang-

A heavy sea was running, which threatened to swamp the vessels, owing to their injuries below the water line, and in order to ease them as much as possible he headed to the south. He saw nothing of the enemy and sighted only a few merchantmen until he encountered the American squadron off Luzon,
